

To Whom It May Concern,

I'm happy to recommend Keon for future product management internships or entry-level roles. Keon interned on my team at Electronic Arts and consistently demonstrated a strong learning mindset, strategic thinking, and initiative throughout his time here.

One of Keon's key contributions was helping define our top-of-funnel strategy for the EA webstore. He worked closely with partners to shape the approach and clarify the metrics needed to measure success. This helped lay the groundwork for improving how we attract and convert players on EA-owned channels.

Keon has also been proactive in taking on more responsibility, including exploring opportunities to optimize commerce across our webshops. He has started digging into data and identifying areas where we can run experiments to drive impact. This kind of initiative is essential in product roles, where progress often starts with asking the right questions and exploring possible solutions.

Throughout his internship, Keon has shown that he takes feedback seriously and can quickly apply it to improve his work. He's thoughtful about both short-term goals and long-term outcomes—something that's helped him contribute meaningfully to the team's priorities.

Overall, Keon has made solid progress during his time here and has built a strong foundation for a future in product management. I'm confident he will continue to grow and bring value to whichever team he joins next.

Please don't hesitate to reach out if you'd like to discuss his experience further.

Sincerely,

Nicolas Abou Sawan
Product Manager
Electronic Arts